South-Korea

Hello! I'm Gawon!

- + • This is my travel blog! I am currently living in Berlin, Germany, and it has been 3 years since I haven't been to Korea!

In Korea, things like fashion and trends tend to change very quickly, so there are things I don't know about Korea either, but this travel blog introduces the places I must go to when I lived in Korea!

Have fun watching it!

Jeoui Jong (Bell of the night)

On the night of December 31, when the sun goes down, fireworks, festivals and more are held in any country!

+
○ ● Korea also has an event to greet the New Year with this bell ringing 33 times at 12 o'clock on the evening of January 1st!

Large cities such as Seoul, Busan, Daegu, Gwangju, Daejeon, and Ulsan are held simultaneously!

Also, several broadcasters are broadcasting this event live on TV!

Namsan Tower

Namsan Tower is Korea's representative tourist destination and TV tower!

Not only foreigners but also Koreans come here for picnics, walks, and hands-on learning with their families!

There is an observation deck at the top of the tower, but you need to buy a ticket to use it. (Tickets can be purchased in the lobby on the 1st floor.) After passing the lobby, there is 'Inside Seoul', Seoul's largest immersive media exhibition space, in the corridor between the elevators. It's a great place to take pictures!

If you take the elevator and go up to the observatory, you can see Seoul at a glance.

Inside there is a souvenir shop and a place selling pretty locks. The lock can go outside and place it on the railing or the lock tree! (in pot) Lovers lock love, families lock each other's health and happiness, friends lock friendships, everyone else locks their wishes!

Lotte World

This is a large department store! In the photo, there is a tall building, but originally there was only a circular building under the building. The building is now 4 years old, and the original circular building is called the 1st Lotte World, and the building is called the 2nd Lotte World. The 2nd Lotte World is currently the tallest building in Korea. (You can also see clouds from the observatory!)

There are amusement parks on the basement and first floors, just like Europa Park. This amusement park has lots of rides, snacks, restaurants, souvenir shops, indoors and outdoors, and you have to buy a ticket.

Gyeongbokgung Palace is said to have been built in September 1395.

This is where the old Korean king lived.

It is known that the royal family and the servants and scholars under it lived in the palace.

Gyeongbokgung Palace has a total of 415,802m².

Gyeongbokgung Palace is currently National Treasure No. 223.

The building floating on the lake in the photo is called Gyeonghoeru.

It is said that this place was once used as a venue for entertaining guests, banquet halls for public figures, or for exams and archery competitions!

Hanbok

Traditional hanbok with skirts, jeogori, pants, scarves and other styles and ideas of ideas, customs, forms and techniques.

The unique Hanbok tradition, which has existed for 1,600 years, is the longest in the world and can be seen as the ancient ruins of Silla and Baekje (4th to 6th centuries).
